RECEIVER TO SUE ALL WHO DO NOT PAY BANK

Some Claim Centre County Bank Failed to Charge Off Notes

WILL RESIST IN COURT

Persons who had overdrafts or other indebtedness at the defunct Centre County Bank when that institution went under in May, 1922, are now being notified by Receiver Ivan Walker to make payment or suffer by legal process. It is stated that some who appear on the bank's books as charged with overdrafts claim the charges to be irregular and will put up a fight in the courts to protect their rights. If such suits are instituted there will likely be a revelation of inside workings of the bank even before hearings in bankruptcy are begun. Thus far there has been no decision handed down in the United States District Court of Appeals on the question of whether John M. Shugert, one of the partners, in acknowledging himself a bankrupt, had legal power to declare other partners, or alleged partners, also bankrupts. A decision on this point is looked for any day.

Some of the overdrafts which Receiver Walker is undertaking to collect, upon authority given him by Federal Judge Whitmer, are for the payment of notes, or balances on notes. From what may be learned, a number of those classed as indebted to the bank claim that the bank intentionally failed to charge off and deduct such notes from deposit accounts when the same came due, and that this was done to keep deposits at the highest point possible. In support of this contention, it is set forth that the bank never asked for payment of such notes or indicated in any other way that the notes were not classed as having been paid and cancelled.

Many of the items of indebtedness which Receiver Walker has undertaken to collect are not disputed. In fact, quite a number of such items have already been paid.

Contest in Civic Writing.

A contest in writing a Civic editorial, put on by Prof. J. F. Gilston, instructor, at the Bellefonte High School, was very interesting. The members of the Freshman class wrote the editorials and the Senior class acted as judges. Miss Mary Woodring was awarded honors for writing the best editorial.

RICHARD HOFFMAN HURT

Had a Narrow Escape but Injuries Not Serious.

Richard Hoffman, a son of Mrs. Bertha Hoffman of Howard, and a senior at The Pennsylvania State College, was run down by the Potter-Hoy Hardware Co. delivery truck on Sunday afternoon along the state road between Lemont and Rockview. Jesse Dunlap was driving the truck and explained the misfortune as follows:

"I was returning from State College with a party of young folks and intended to drive past the Emerick bus. Another car, which I had not noticed, came from the opposite direction and, in turning out for this other car, the bus crowded me. You can see some yellow paint on the right fender of the truck where I scraped against the bus. The young man was walking along the side of the road but there was a wire fence and no chance for him to get out of the way so that I caught him with the truck.

"I stopped and picked him up and took him as far as Rockview, where I had to turn off the main road to take some of the party. We then put the young man on the bus and he was taken to the office of a physician at Bellefonte."

Mr. Hoffman's mother, who was visiting on Sunday at the home of the student's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Holmes, on Willowbank street, Bellefonte, was called. She replied:

"Richard has just come from the hospital. An X Ray was taken but no broken bones were found. He is bruised and is very sore but expects to return to college tomorrow (Tuesday). He was apparently caught by a hook on the side of the truck, which lodged in his clothing and dragged him."

CHILDREN SERIOUSLY HURT

Father Escaped With Cuts When Team Ran Away.

John Smay, of Joliet, escaped serious injury, being painfully bruised and cut, however, but his children, Erma, 10 years old, and Howard, 7 years old, were seriously hurt about the head, the boy also suffered a fractured jaw when the three were thrown from a wagon when the team Mr. Smay was driving became unmanageable and ran away on Saturday afternoon. The children are in the hospital and their recovery is hoped for. Yesterday, it was learned, that their condition has changed but little though they still retain consciousness as they have from the start.

The team ran away when the brakes, applied on a steep hill, began to make a screeching noise. This frightened one of the horses, which had been purchased but recently by Mr. Smay.

Highly Honored.

Our friend and correspondent, the genial Capt. W. B. Fry, veterinarian at Pine Grove Mills and veteran of the Civil war, says he is not yet in the octogenarian class. But he is very close to the fourscore mark. The remarkable part of it all is that he has been between the plow-handles, doing a good day's work, many days this spring and then, to prove that he has more "pep" than many of our younger generation, he drives about at night, attending to his duties as a veterinarian. He was highly honored at the installation of officers of the I. O. O. F. lodge, Penn's valley No. 276, on Saturday evening, when presented with the 50 years jewel, an honor very few in Centre County attain. The complete news of the installation is given in Pine Grove Mills correspondence, this week. May our mutual friend be spared many years to continue his usefulness in the community—to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before.

Rev. Maynard Gets Call.

Rev. M. DePui Maynard, the beloved rector of the Bellefonte Episcopal church, has received a call from West Chester, where he has preached on several occasions. The call came wholly unsolicited. Rev. Maynard said, in answer to a query and he has it under consideration but would be unable to give any statements as to his decision for perhaps a week or two. Rev. Maynard was highly recommended for the rectorship by Dr. George C. Foley, of the Divinity school, who has been in temporary charge of the parish. Rev. Maynard has made many friends during the years he has been rector here in which he has shown a live interest in the community, taking special measure to boost the boys of the community. It is the earnest wish of his friends that he may decide to continue his good work here.

Alumni to Meet.

The Alumni Association of the Bellefonte High School are requested to attend a meeting in the eighth grade room on Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

FIRE DANGERS WITH US CAUTION IS WATCHWORD

Big Barn Near College and Railroad Station Burned.

LOSSES OVER $12,000

The fire dangers are greater now than they have been for a long time and continued dry weather will make it all the more necessary to use greatest care to prevent fires from starting. Thousands of dollars of loss was caused in the county this past week from fires.

The big barn on the B. F. Homan farm, better known as the old Lytle farm along the White Hall road just south of State College, was destroyed on Sunday morning, the flames being discovered about 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Homan, the owner, is a well known resident of State College. His son Merle is tenant on the farm. Their loss was roughly estimated at $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

The cause of the fire is not known. It had good headway when first noticed and it was with difficulty that the horses and stock saved, were taken from the burning structure. As it was, four head of cattle and three horses were burned.

Merle Homan is an ex-service man and was started in farming by his father after he was discharged from service three years ago. He specialized in dairying and was very successful. The implements, livestock and hay and grain were owned by the son. Besides the barn and livestock, there were several out-buildings, including the dairy building, a big silo, hog-pen, 200 bushels of wheat, oats, corn, large quantities of hay and straw, all farm implements, the harness and other articles generally found in the barn on a big farm, destroyed.

The building was an old landmark in that section. We understand it will be replaced this summer.

The station of the Bellefonte Central Railroad company at Hunters Park, another landmark, was destroyed. The building was erected when the park was established in 1892. It was two carsloads of railroad ties, valued at $1,000, which were destroyed. This fire was first noticed about 11 o'clock on Saturday night. It was fanned by a west wind and burned rapidly, the flames lighting the sky for miles around.

F. H. Thomas, the superintendent, said, "Our men had carefully burned away all rubbish and dry grass in the park, to the south of the building, on Friday and Saturday, so as to lessen danger from fire. The foreman reported that before leaving on Saturday he had carefully investigated and knew that the fire was extinguished. I think the fire might have been caused by fishermen who fished in the stream nearby and that they had built a fire which they thoughtlessly left burning, sparks from which were blown into the station and caused the fire. We of course, will not replace the building but it would cost about $1,000 to rebuild it. The ties are needed and are a big loss. We carried $150 insurance. The Undine firemen came up with their pumper and made sure the blaze was extinguished so that no more fires would start."

There have been reports of at least a half dozen forest fires in the county the past few weeks, most of which have been extinguished by determined efforts of the forest wardens in their respective districts but each one has meant a loss, a set-back in growth of valuable young timber.

Mrs. Henry Knoffsinger, of Pleasant Gap, was painfully burned about the face and hands on Saturday morning in making a heroic and successful effort to save her home from fire. Mr. Knoffsinger had left the house to go to his work a short time before the blaze was discovered. Mrs. Knoffsinger sent word to him and then fought the flames herself. The fire started from an overheated chimney and burned a small hole in the roof near the chimney.

Fire destroyed the house and barn of Mrs. Mary Smalls, near Snow Shoe, together with the family household effects, a horse, cow and calf, yesterday afternoon. The flames spread to the nearby woods and a forest fire, one of the worst in years, burned over hundreds of acres. This morning the fire was reported under control.

A spark from a chimney yesterday afternoon set fire to the roof of the property at Axemann recently purchased from Ray White by William Solt and occupied by the latter's family. The local firemen responded and the loss was kept at a minimum, being reported as about $200.

The foregoing Trusteeship of my estate shall cease at the deaths of my daughter Elizabeth H. B. Callaway and my two sons George T. Bush, and Harry P. Bush. I then direct that my estate shall be settled and the balance shall be divided equally between my grand children Louise B. Garber, intermarried with Harry L. Garber, and Magdalene C. I hereby provide, nevertheless, that if any of the beneficiaries named in this will, in controversy, dispute or call in question the validity of this will, or of the estate hereby granted, then in such case, the estates, bequests and devises herein made to such person or persons so contesting or disputing my said will, shall cease, determine and become absolutely void, and henceforth all such estates, bequests and devises shall go to and belong to and be vested in the residuary beneficiaries in equal shares, if

MAY GET RAILROAD

State College Line From Tyrone Reported Considered.

Concerning many reports as to the likelihood of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. extending their lines into State College, we refer to the following which appeared in the Altoona Mirror last Thursday evening:

"That the management of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. has under serious consideration plans for extending the Fairbrook branch, which extends from Tyrone to Fairbrook, from the latter place to State College and possibly to Lemont, became known last Friday. This information follows the announcement made last Thursday by Superintendent J. K. Johnston, of the Tyrone Division, that the five mile stretch of road from Fairbrook to Scotia has been abandoned.

"State College lies directly east of Scotia and northeast of Fairbrook, being 6 or 7 miles from the latter place. If the plan is carried out it will give the Pennsylvania a direct line from Tyrone to Lewisburg, as connection would be made with the Lewisburg line at Lemont, which lies north of State College. The extension would mean much for the college town and adjacent country.

"The spur from Fairbrook to Scotia was built about 40 years ago by Andrew Carnegie, then in the heyday of his activity in the steel business. There were ore mines at Scotia and the ore was hauled from there and from Juniata Mines, then known as Tow Hill, the Pennsylvania Furnace. Scotia was known in the early days as Ore Hill, but the name was changed to Scotia, a creation from the name of Scotland, the native land of Carnegie.

"With the discovery of ore in the lake regions, the ore mines there as elsewhere in the state were abandoned, although it is said there are still large deposits there."—Inquiry by The Republican in well informed circles met with the statement that the P. R. R. has no present intention of building such an extension.—Editor The Republican.

JUSTICE LECTURED TEACHER

School Marm Charged With Using Ruler Too Freely.

Miss Annie Yearick, a young and vivacious school teacher of Gregg township, was hailed before Justice J. M. Keichline, of Bellefonte, on Saturday morning on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Mrs. Mary Auman, whose daughter Claire is a pupil in the school taught by the teacher. After giving the teacher a lecture she will not soon forget, according to the Justice, the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

The trouble reached a culmination on April 11th, when the child, a girl eight years old, it was said in testimony, was so severely punished by the teacher, alleged to have struck her with the edge of a ruler until the child's body was marked blue by bruises, that the mother could not put up with it any longer. So many interested persons were present that it was necessary to hold the hearing in the Court House, where it was held in the library room.

The teacher denied that she had used the sharp edge of the ruler but admitted striking the child with the ruler, on the flat side, because the girl came to class without her book and could not tell where it was. She claimed further that she had not overstepped her rights and did not punish the child any more than she had a right to.

Peculiar Ailment of Motorist.

A local physician, whose name must be withheld, had a most unusual condition to cope with on Saturday evening, the first he had ever had of such peculiar tendencies. The patient was a man who had motored to town with his mother, names of both withheld to avoid embarrassment, and the mother noticed he was driving continually along the left side of the road. She mentioned it to him and he replied. The situation did not satisfy his mother, however, who felt sure that something very unusual had afflicted her son. She took him to the office of the physician whose treatment brought the man to normal. The physician said, "I do not know what was wrong with the man. He seemed to have driven the car and to have answered questions in a mechanical manner, apparently in an unconscious condition and he told me, when he returned to consciousness, that he did not remember of driving the car or of answering questions. The man is to come back this week again for treatment."

W. E. Hurley to Uniontown.

W. E. Hurley, who recently resigned as highway superintendent of roads in Centre County, departed on Wednesday morning for Uniontown, where he will be superintendent on a big road job for the Thomas Lynch Construction Co.

COULDN'T LOSE PET SNAKE BUT STRANGER KILLED IT

First Snake Story of Season Is an Unusual Yarn.

KILLED IT ON FRIDAY

Those delightful summer-like days of the week-end brought with them "The Republican's" first snake story of the season—a tale of a gang of wiremen employed by the Keystone Power Corporation who spied a pair of blacksnakes and attempted to catch them alive.

T. M. Watkins is engineering a line being placed over the mountains near Pine Grove Mills and it was about two weeks ago when they spied the snakes on one of the mountains. One of the snakes got away but the other was captured and placed in a box. It was kept as a pet. It was being kept at the warehouse at the corner of Lamb and Water streets and one morning it was among the missing. All last week the friends of the snake, a reptile about four feet long, watched for it and on Friday morning, with the warming up of the air, the "pet" returned. It was playing on the floor and apparently having a good time.

The warehouse men had been worried somewhat during the week when the snake was about but not to be seen and so they said, "Watkins, you've got to get that snake out of here."

"Very well," he replied.

He gracefully picked up the snake and put it in his auto. Driving along the road near town, he gently put the "pet" on the ground to go its way in peace.

Some person, not so thoughtful of the joy which even a snake must get from life, probably came that way just a little later and, with that ever-present hatred instilled in men when Adam and Eve were sent from the Garden of Eden, he dispatched the snake. Lying dead by the side of the road, the blacksnake was discovered by Mr. Watkins as he returned to Bellefonte in the evening.

INCREASED WAGES

J. H. & C. K. Eagle, Inc., Silk Mills Very Busy.

The board of governors of J. H. and C. K. Eagle, Inc., this morning announced to their employees a voluntary increase in wages in every department, and in all the plants, effective as of April 9th. This announcement is most commendable and illustrates the attitude of fairness towards its co-workers, and also the efficient management which has made such action possible. This action on the part of the company has not only brought rejoicing to the thousands in their employ, but also to the communities in which their many plants are located. The magnitude of this general increase to the co-workers of the corporation can be visualized only by realizing that it approximates one-half million dollars per year additional wages, a substantial part of which will be distributed in Bellefonte and vicinity, indicating that J. H. & C. K. Eagle, Inc. is a big factor in the life and prosperity of this community.

In addition to the general increase, the company has established a very satisfactory starting weekly wage for girls and boys who have no knowledge of, or experience in, the silk industry. This action affords the young girls and boys desirous of employment, an unusual opportunity to learn silk manufacturing at relatively higher starting wages paid for learners. Furthermore, the company has established an unusual high wage scale for night shift workers, which should be attractive to the young men of the community who have had previous experience at the silk mill.

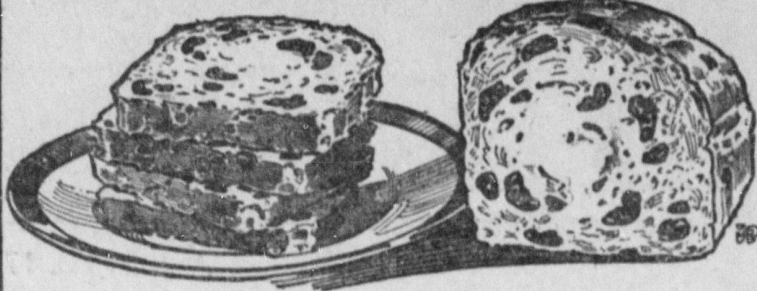

Accused of Attacking Girl.

Herman Whyles, 17 years old, of Philipsburg, is in Bellefonte jail without bail for a hearing in court to answer serious charges preferred against him by Miss Mary Durizzo, also of Philipsburg. It is alleged that Whyles attacked the girl, who fought to protect her honor and succeeded, but lost her handbag, containing her purse, which the youth is accused of grabbing and running away with when overcome in his attack.

Case of Typhoid Fever.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mensch, on Allegheny street, was quarantined on Monday morning for typhoid fever, the only case of this disease to be reported in this section for some time. It is pleasing to note that the condition of the patient, Charles, Jr., is reported very favorable. The kind of typhoid fever he has is known as para-typhoid and is said to be a very mild form.

Taught England to Smoke.

The first man to make cigarettes for the benefit of these islands was Mr. Nicholas Coundouris, a Greek who became an American citizen. It was in 1898 that he brought ten bales of Turkish tobacco to England and started to make cigarettes, which were then unknown.

"At first," Mr. Coundouris told me, "only a few people adopted the new habit; they included the then Prince of Wales and Lady Mordaunt. It took much patience and perseverance before cigarette smoking became popular."

Mr. Coundouris, who is one of the most picturesque figures in London, is eighty-seven, and is able to speak 20 languages.—London Tit-Bits.

What to Eat and Why

Making a Big Word an Easy Part of Your Diet

Car-bo-hy-drates make up about 60 per cent of the average diet. They produce heat and energy. They are largely secured from the grain and vegetable starches.

In the long, slow baking by which Grape-Nuts is produced from wheat and malted barley, the grain starches are partially pre-digested. They are changed to "dextrins" and "maltose"—forms of Carbohydrates so easy to digest that they form the basis of the most successful baby foods.

Many people have digestive trouble caused by the food-starch in its original form, but Grape-Nuts has been famous for a quarter-century for its exceptional ease of digestion, and assimilation, and

But That Was Different. Mother was entertaining her card club, and, of course, desired anything rather than embarrassment. Arnold, very young but very much a basketball fan, burst into the room with:

"Mother, may I go to the basketball game?"

"No," replied mother. "You went to a game last night."

Thoughtful for a minute, Arnold came back with:

"But this one won't cost anything, mother."

Adolph Zukor, the movie magnate, said in a talk on advertising in Los Angeles:

"Our advertisement writers follow one another like sheep. How sick we get of their phrases. Style 'built into' clothes, the 'house of Schmidt,' and all that sort of thing, you know. The average advertisement writer reminds me of the salesman who said in proposing to a girl:

"My love for you, darling, exceeds anything that can be offered in that particular line."

ALL'S FAIR

By CORONA REMINGTON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CHARLOTTE BRONSON sat in the sun on the porch of the Country club and beneath half-closed lids eagerly scanned her surroundings. A man passing by glanced at the girl in the chair and softened his step lest he rouse her. He was undoubtedly nice, she decided, but not very interesting. She assumed her old position and wondered idly who would pass next. A girl appeared suddenly around the corner of the veranda accompanied by a man. Charlotte held her breath when she saw him. In a second she knew, she absolutely knew, that he was magnificent.

He was her dream man in the flesh. There were the tall figure and the dark eyes that could smile. Who could he be? For the first time she looked at the girl at his side. Yes, it was Florence Nelson. Would she bring him over and introduce him? Florence saw her, waved a friendly greeting and came toward her.

"Miss Bronson, this is Mr. Fleming," she smiled.

"Oh, I wonder whether you are any relation to Arthur Fleming, a lawyer I know in Chicago?" said Charlotte, putting out her hand warmly.

"He's my first cousin. Arthur and I grew up together."

"Now, you two have something to talk about. I'm going to find Dot," said Florence, starting off.

"Feels good to meet some one who knows old Arthur," laughed Fleming. "How long since you've seen him?"

They talked and laughed together for half an hour or more. Then Fleming rose.

"Sorry I must go, but I only have two hours before dinner and I'd like to exercise. No chance that you'd like to play a little tennis with me or learn tennis or something?" he asked hopefully.

"Oh, would you teach me?" asked Charlotte, eagerly jumping up.

"Certainly. I'd love to. Tennis is my hobby, you know."

They walked off toward the courts together, chatting happily about nothing. At first Charlotte seemed clumsy, but soon she improved and by the end of the afternoon she played amazingly well for a beginner.

"You're going to make a cracker-jack player," he told her enthusiastically as they returned to the club. "May we have another lesson tomorrow afternoon?"

"I'd love to, but I'm afraid I'd bore you. I'm so stupid."

"Bore me!" he laughed. "How could you?"

And so it was arranged. They played the next afternoon and the next, and after a while it became a settled thing that they should do it each day. And after a month of hard practice she had really become an expert player.

"Charlotte, I want you to stay over and enter the contest we're going to have next week," he begged.

"Oh, but, Tom, I'd get so scandalously licked," she gasped.

"No; I believe you'd win, and if you did I'd be so darned proud of you I'd chuck the law business and become a tennis professor, with you as assistant teacher."

"I'll think about it," she promised, "and let you know tomorrow."

Of course, she stayed. She had intended doing so from the first second.

And the contest that next week was close. Charlotte fought like a tiger to the very end and showed a skill that was amazing in a beginner.

"I'm too happy for anything," she told him when they were alone at last, after she had been presented with the silver loving cup.

"And I'm mighty proud of my pupil. I can tell you, and, somehow, Charlotte, teaching you to play tennis has been the biggest thing in my life. I wonder whether you feel that way too, dear."

He put a caressing hand over hers. "I—I've been very happy," she admitted.

"Then don't go, Charlotte; stay with me forever—" he begged.

When Miss Bronson's visit was over and she returned home her mother greeted her with a look of utter bewilderment on her face.

"Charlotte, I just received a letter from a Mr. Tom Fleming. He says something about proposing to you and goes on to say a whole lot more about teaching you to play tennis. Teaching you and you already a champion!"

"Sh—h—, mother, you mustn't tell that. I didn't think it was a very big sin and it isn't always wise to shine too much before a man. When he offered to help me—why, it was simply irresistible."

"You absolutely amazing child!" laughed Mrs. Bronson. "But it's none of my business, dear. By the way, there's a letter from him for you, too."

"Dearest," it ran.

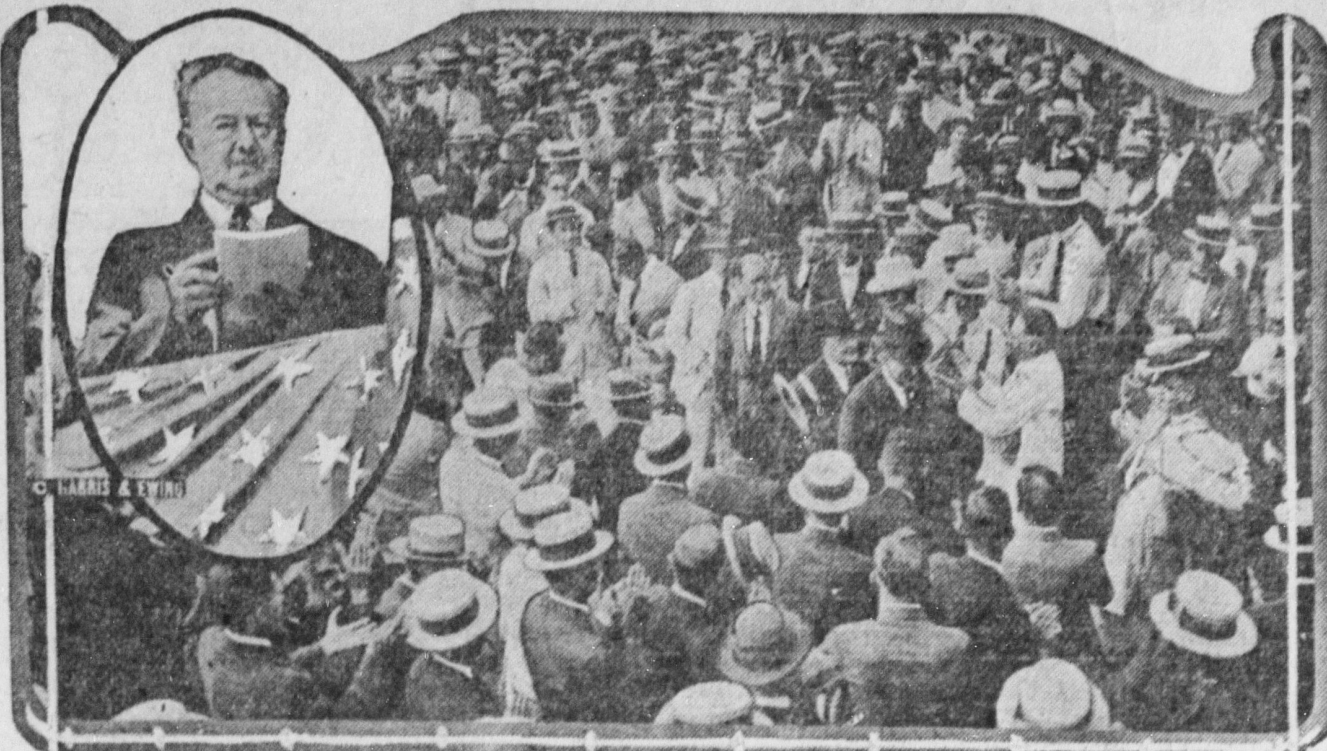

"Just after our second lesson Arthur wrote me you were a cracker-jack player, but whatever the reason I asked nothing better of fate, so helped carry on the little deception, but 'fess up now, didn't you ask me to teach you to play tennis because you wanted to be with me? I'm coming over tomorrow. Can't stand it another second alone. Love."

"The conceit of the man," laughed Charlotte jamming the letter back into its envelope.

"What's the matter, daughter?"

"Nothing, only men are so deceiving, but I adore him. Dinner ready, mummy? I'm starving."

Lay Claim to Part of New York City

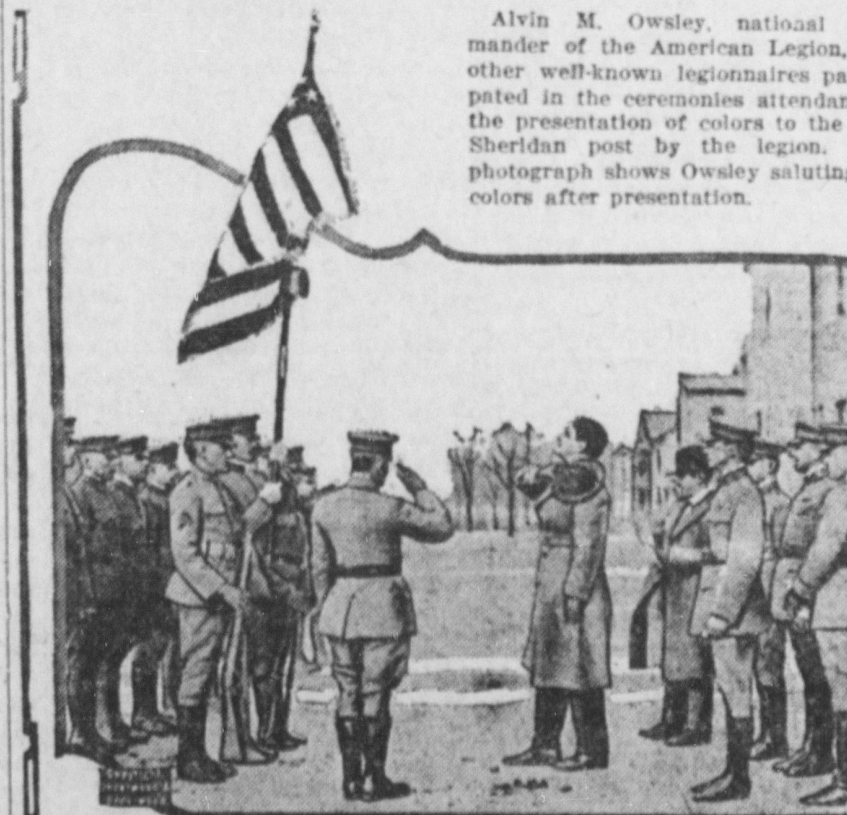

The Whitehall building, Trinity church and a number of skyscrapers are a portion of what Warren Edwards, a Cincinnati policeman, and George Spicer claim as their property. They are descendants of Robert Edwards who was rewarded by King George III with a 100-acre farm, comprising what now is a part of the financial district, for bravery in Indian wars.

MILTON LOVES TO KNIT

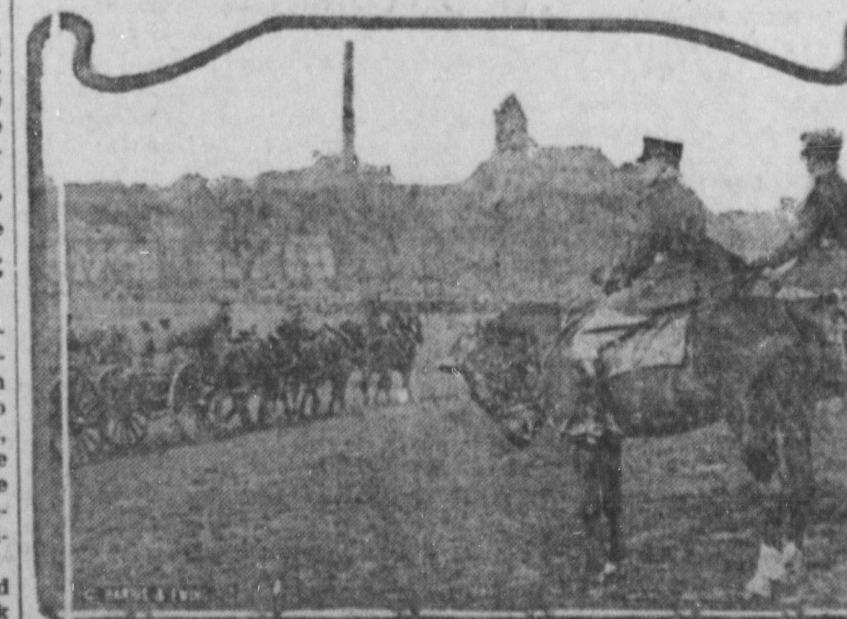

Thomaston, Conn., doesn't understand Milton Grimshaw. He is "too sensitive" and has none of the coarse ways of this world. Milton has attained six feet and two inches of height, and 140 pounds of weight during his twenty years of existence; but, as his mother says, "He's too gentle for the boys and there aren't any girls that he likes down in the clockshop where he works." Milton just loves to knit and, says Mother Grimshaw, "he is fond of designing women's clothes and making dolls and artistic things like that." So Milton put an ad in a New York paper, asking that some rich family adopt him. He wants to travel and educate himself.

Fort Sheridan Post Gets New Colors

Alvin M. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, and other well-known legionnaires participated in the ceremonies attendant on the presentation of colors to the Fort Sheridan post by the legion. The photograph shows Owsley saluting the colors after presentation.

High Compliment to General Allen

On his last day of active duty in the United States army, Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen, who commanded the American army of occupation in Germany following the armistice, reviewed a dress parade of all troops in the District of Columbia on the Monument grounds. The troops were paraded as a special compliment to the retiring general.

FRED'S ROBIN

Fred went camping and the first thing almost that he saw was a little baby robin in a nest by the camp house. The nest had evidently been built by the robins some time before. And evidently, alas, something must have happened to the mother robin and to the others of the robin family, for there was only this one little robin all by himself.

He had not been alone for very long though. For when Fred began feeding him bread and water and worms the bird seemed to feel a great deal better and he also used his wings—or tried to flutter them—a little bit.

Oh, but the robin kept Fred busy, though! Yes, he found himself spending much time in digging worms for the ever-hungry little robin.

One of the boys had brought a dog to camp and the dog became friendly with the little robin, too, and would sit around and watch it for hours.

The dog wouldn't hurt the robin for anything—in fact he seemed to feel that he was a clumsy creature and that he must walk very carefully when the robin was about.

The robin seemed to feel that all the boys had to do in the world was to feed him.

In fact he let them know, so they couldn't mistake what he meant by any possible chance, when he wanted to be fed.

He would scold and fuss and give a croaky chirp until the meal was on the way.

Then the dog would give a little bark, too, as though to say:

"Baby robin is hungry now, boys. Step lively, boys; baby robin is hungry."

The dog used to have friends come to camp to see him from the nearby town and Fred would have lumps of sugar for the guests as they appeared to pass the time of day and to tell the news of the dog world.

But the robin was the great center of attraction and everyone was good to him.

When the dog's friends would come to call the dog would take the others away in case they did not understand.

But sometimes he would bring one to see the robin and the visitor dog would come about so carefully, almost, too, as though he were afraid he would do something clumsy and as though he had been told by the dog belonging to Fred's camp friend that he must be very, very careful if he were to be allowed to see the baby robin.

And so the summer went along. And the robin no longer was a baby robin.

Instead he flew about and, though he now gathered his own food, he still came around the camp for crumbs and delicacies. And he knew that there would always be a bath and a cool drink of water for him, too.

He was not quite so much one of the camping family as he had been.

He had been flying about too much and the freedom of the air had made him care less for the little camp.

But still he did care for it. And he cared for his friends, too.

Most especially he cared for Fred and the dog!

He seemed to know that Fred had been the first one to care for him and that Fred had done a great deal for him.

And he seemed to know that the dog had been his real friend, too, and that the dog had been so careful not to hurt him.

And then the summer passed. And the robin's thoughts began to turn southward.

He had heard the other birds talking and he knew that he would enjoy a warm climate in the winter. Besides, he could see that soon the camp would be broken up. Doubtless they moved away until another year, too.

So the little robin looked about him. He had nothing he had to pack! Only he looked very carefully about him and said to himself:

"I'll be back here again next year. This is a real home to me." And he sang a little song of farewell and of thanks to Fred and the dog.

A Consistent Career.

"You used to be perfectly willing to pose for the films," said the disappointed photographer.

"I've been thinking the matter over," said Senator Sorghum, "and I don't believe I'd better do any more film work. I'm supposed to be a statesman; not an amateur movie actor."

ODD IDEAS CONCERNING RATS

Belief That the Rodents Could Not Live in Certain Parts of Scotland—Witchcraft Symbols.

Many curious beliefs formerly prevailed in Scotland concerning the rat. One of the most common of these was that there were certain districts where rats could not live, and could not even be introduced. The old Scottish historian Hector Boece states that there were no rats to be found in his day in Buchan, while a later author, Sir Robert Gordon, made a similar statement regarding Sutherlandshire. He says, "If they come thither in ships from other parts, they die presently, how soon they do smell the air of that country." At the same time, according to a correspondent of the Sportsman, he asserts that rats abounded in the neighboring county of Caithness. Even so late as 1704 the belief prevailed. The writer of the articles on Morven and Roseneath in "The Statistical Account of Scotland," states that attempts were made to introduce the rat into these parishes, but without success. With regard to Roseneath, he says: "From a prevailing opinion that the soil of this parish is hostile to that animal, some years ago a West Indian planter actually carried out to Jamaica several casks of Roseneath earth, with a view to kill the rats that were destroying his sugar-canes. It is said this had not the desired effect, so we lost a valuable export." During the period of the witch mania rats were looked upon as the symbols of witchcraft. That they could be exterminated by a course of rhyming was a belief common to both Scotland and Ireland, though more popular in the latter country than the former.

AIDED THE DEPUTY SHERIFF

Humorous Incident in Which "Gunman" Figured Prominently in Early Days of the West.

In his "When the West Was Young," Frederick R. Bechdolt tells of the meeting in Cochise county, Arizona, between young Breckenridge, a sheriff's deputy, and Curly Bill, a gunman with a price on his head. The young deputy had been sent out to collect taxes in a rough region and he would admire to have Bill ride along to help him take care of the roll. We read:

"Curly Bill was a great deal slower at thinking than he was at drawing his gun, and there was much food for thought in that bold proposition.

"He gazed at young Breckenridge for some moments in silence. Gradually his lips relaxed. Smiling, he turned and addressed the occupants of the room.

"Boys," he cried, 'line up.' "And when the line was formed before the bar he waved his hand.

"This here's the deputy sheriff, come to collect the taxes in our end of the county; and I aim to help him do the job up right."

Here seems to be one of the reasons why they speak of "rare old days" in the American incident.

Perfect Platonic Friendship.

The friendship between the great artist, Michelangelo, and the Roman noblewoman, Vittoria Colonna, is one of the world's most illustrious examples of platonic friendship, says Oliver Barton in the Mentor Magazine. When they first met, Vittoria Colonna was forty-six and Michelangelo sixty. She became the greatest influence in the life of the fiery genius. They were accustomed to meet outside of the church of San Silvestro, and discuss painting and life. The gist of these dialogues was set down by another artist and later published as Michelangelo's "Dialogues on Painting."

After withdrawing to the cloister the Marquessa Colonna continued to communicate with the master. A book of her sonnets was always with him. She died in 1547, but until his death he remained as devoted to her memory as he had been to her in life.

Indian Legend of Rattlesnake.

A Texan reports killing a rattlesnake in west Texas that measured eight feet and had 24 rattles and a button. But in the winter of 1868-69, when the Kansas volunteer regiment joined General Sheridan's command, the roving soldiers discovered, in Wichita mountains, a den of rattlesnakes which tops the record.

After the soldiers had taken their souvenirs and had thrown a number of the reptiles into the creek and brush, 158 were counted. Several, without their heads and tails, measured eight feet and were six inches in diameter. The sum total was estimated at 200.

As usual, the Indians claimed that the den was a "medicine" den. An aged Arapahoe chief had entered it, to die, and had turned into a monster diamond-back, the father of all the snakes in that country.

English Clay Pits.

Golders Green in London derives its name, it is said, from the fact that "gaulters," or clayworkers, could obtain good material for wattle daubing. There are numerous instances where the word "golden," or "golder," is used in connection with clay working. A "Golden Way" in Suffolk led to some clay deposits of excellent quality for building purposes. The name is akin, therefore, to the "clay pits" between Ealing and Brentford, where the medieval builders in West Middlesex obtained building material. These pits were subsequently used as burial pits in the Great plague.

THINGS I HAVE NOT HAD

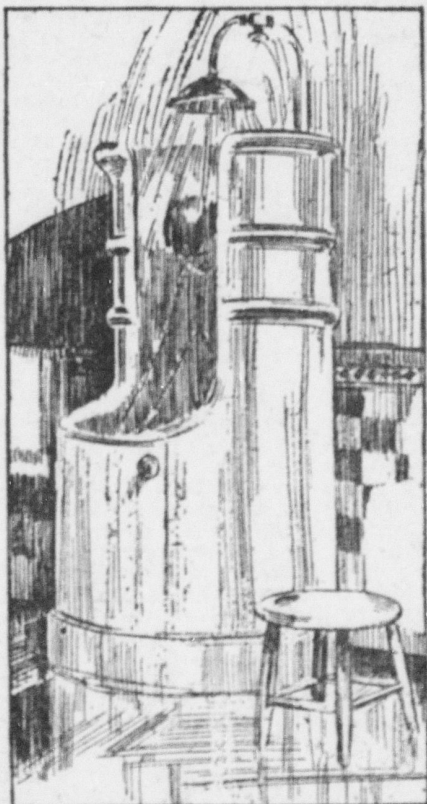

I pray I may be glad
For the things I have not had;
Glad that somewhere they wait,
And that near, or far, or late
I shall find them, lingering so,
In the dawn or even glow
With never a trace of tears
Left by the passing years.
They know not time nor space,
For they have not taken place.
Love which I never knew,
Beautiful, pure and true,
Awaits, and the distant gleams
From the hearth fires of my dreams
Which will one day come to be
Such a bright reality.
Glad for the past am I,
And for today's blue sky.
But I am more than glad
For the things I have not had.

BATHTUB THAT SAVES SPACE

Upright Contrivance That Should Find Favor Among Flat Dwellers in the Country's Big Cities.

The true meaning of the expression "Independent as a hog on ice" is not understood by most people. The hog thus circumstanced said: "If I can't stand up I can sit down."

That was why he felt independent. And the same idea applies in a way to a contrivance invented by Thomas J. Swift of Minneapolis. It is a bathtub so constructed that the user enjoys the ablutionary performance in a seated posture.

In these days, when every square foot of space in a flat is so valuable, a bathtub of this pattern would seem to be especially desirable. It is built vertically, so to speak, instead of horizontally, and the bather, simply stepping into it over the front (the upper part of which is open for the purpose), reposes himself upon the porcelain seat at the rear.

For a shower from overhead he has only to jerk an handle.—New York World.

Didn't Want Political Office.

Declaring she won the recent election because club women jokingly wrote her name on the ballot, Miss Clara Arnold, nineteen years old, protested when asked to qualify for the office of justice of peace and police judge in Nickerson, Kansas. "It's a joke," she said. "I don't want to be called Judge Arnold." Informed she must qualify or be subject to prosecution, she said: "I'll qualify, but I don't want the job." Friends declare Miss Arnold is the youngest, if not the only, woman police judge in Kansas.

Wives Arise to Complain.

Wives in Fort William are now working against the election of their husbands to city offices. More than one alderman admits family pressure against his being a candidate again and one woman is actually canvassing her friends not to vote for her husband. Practically every member of the Fort William city council has attended 200 committee meetings, besides 20 council meetings in the year. Wives complain they hardly know their homes.—Montreal Family Herald.

Rats in Migration.

A quarry worker cycling from Peak forest to Tideswell, near Buxton, Eng., at dusk was stopped by several hundreds of rats who were proceeding in orderly form down the road in front of him. He dismounted and followed them at a short distance, but they took no notice of him, finally disappearing in a plowed field. It is believed this army of rats came from some old kilns and buildings and were in search of a new home.

Fruit Well Preserved.

During the celebration of her fiftieth birthday a Milford, Maine, woman opened a jar of fruit which was put up by her mother in 1872 two months before the celebrant was born. The fruit was found to be in excellent condition and quite palatable.

Disciple of Fagin Caught.

On the lines of Fagin's in Dickens' "Oliver Twist" a cripple in London, England, was conducting a school in which he was inducting 24 pupils into the mysteries of being good thieves. He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

PURE ICE CREAM BILL.

Signed by the Governor and is Now a Law.

Governor Pinchot has signed the pure ice cream bill of Senator Jones, preventing the manufacture or sale of adulterated ice cream, fixing the standards of butter fat, and providing penalties for violation.

The new ice cream law became necessary because of the rapid growth of the sale of ice cream since prohibition became effective and the fact that the great demand for it has attracted to the trade unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers. The law applies particularly to coated ice cream.

Adulterated coating is prohibited and the act defines adulteration to mean presence of boric acid, formaldehyde, saccharin or other added substance deleterious to health; salts of copper, iron oxide, ochres, deleterious flavoring matter or coloring matter not true to name; fats, oils or paraffin other than milk fats. Cocoa butter may be used in chocolate ice cream and chocolate coatings.

The law also prohibits products made in imitation of ice cream and sold under a trade name, and no ice cream can be sold from any cabinet which contains any article other than ice cream. The latter provision would prevent sale of ice cream which had been kept in the same cabinet or refrigerator as meats and similar foods.

It is also unlawful to sell ice cream containing less than eight per cent. butter fat, except when fruits or nuts are used, and then it shall contain not less than six per cent. butter fat. This provision would make unlawful the sale of many of the manufactured food products made of milk. It would not affect water ices.

False labeling and branding are also prohibited. Fines for any violations of the law range from $25 to $100 and jail sentences from thirty to sixty days. All fines are to go to the State bureau of foods, to be used principally in enforcement of this and other pure food laws.

HOW THE FARMER IS "BUNKED."

Robbed Going and Coming, With Little Hope of Relief.

A farmer with aspirations to have an attachment made to his house and a bathroom installed started out to a building materials and ascertain the cost of labor. He discovered lumber prices almost prohibitive, hardware, paint and glass at war prices and then he interviewed a stone mason, to find that for every hour's work he would be compelled to pay one bushel of wheat. The plasterer demanded a wage of twenty-five bushels of potatoes a day, the carpenter was content with ten bushels of corn, the plumber with twenty bushels of oats, the painter with three-quarters of a ton of tomatoes, while the man who would help dig the foundations would expect to receive the price of a 4-week-old calf for every two days work. And then he figured to grow the potatoes and corn, the wheat and tomatoes, the oats and help feed the mother of the calf, he would have to pay a hired man $50 a month, board him, his automobile in gasoline, do his washing and mending and take his impudence.

He calculated the cost of fertilizers, the almost incalculable taxes, and then he realized he had a wife and six children to support, sugar to buy at 10 cents a pound, coal at $16 a ton, bran at $50 a ton, and other absolute necessities at corresponding prices, but he wondered how he would be able to produce the grain and crops and cash. He finally concluded he would postpone building and patiently await the day when a higher tariff might be laid on farm products to stop the importation of wheat and corn, oats and tomatoes and the killing competition of pauper farm labor of Canada and Europe, which high tariff to protect farmers would doubtless raise prices in comparison with the price of commodities he has to buy. Meanwhile, he and his family will continue to bathe in tubs and creeks, content that in time all things come to him who will but wait.

John B. Sayers.

John B. Sayers, a well known farmer of Howard where he had resided all his life, died of uremia at the Lock Haven hospital Thursday morning, April 12th. He was admitted to the hospital April 7. Deceased was 61 years of age and is survived by his wife, one son, John, and four daughters, Margaret, Alice, Myrtle and Frances, all at home. College Girl Corsets

There are a lot of substitutes for quality—at prices that tempt; but as genius has yet been born who can produce a substitute for satisfactory results!

Over 10,000 dealers throughout the nation have seen abundant evidence, through their experience in dealing with us, that we treat them as we would have them treat us were we in their place and they in ours. The reason why College Girl Corsets are such quick sellers, and make such boosters of their wearers, is because this fine product produces a more youthful figure, to our knowledge, than any other corset in the world.

MODERN "SAUL OF TARSUS".

Long an Atheist, Italian Author Turns to Defense of Christianity.

That a "Life of Christ" should be heralded in this day of religious skepticism and historic iconoclasm as one of the most extraordinary books, and one of the most fascinating from a purely literary standpoint, that have appeared in recent years, is a fact that in itself reflects a peculiar significance. More remarkable appears the assertion that it is a book which has created a veritable literary sensation in Europe and that from present indications it promises to be one of the world's "best sellers." To add to the marvel—and perhaps in some measure to explain it—it may be stated that the book is an exalted and ecstatic reaffirmation of the Christian doctrines—an unequivocal "defense" of Christ from the onslaughts of the doubters—written by a modern Saul of Tarsus—a man who, a few years ago, was one of the most bitter of pessimists, an atheist, a literary nihilist, whose solution for the problems of humanity was embodied in a work advocating universal suicide. His name is Giovanni Papini—a native of Florence—a name but little known in the English reading and speaking community. "Who is Giovanni Papini?" comments a writer in the February Bookman. "Today, virtually unknown to English speaking people, his name tomorrow perhaps will be a household word. By a single book, his 'Life of Christ,' he seems destined to become one of the world's great figures. In Italy the book has already created what is virtually a sensation, and all Europe and America will soon be in possession of it. Edition after edition is coming from the press in Florence, and translations are being made the world over."

Physically, as well as mentally, Giovanni Papini is and has been for many years a striking and picturesque figure in his own Italian atmosphere. He is described as one of the homeliest of men, "with his gaunt frame, his great shock of curling hair, like a popular pianist, his thin, pallid, olive-tinted face, like an ascetic's, with deep sunken eyes of the student that accuse you mysteriously from behind large, round spectacles, with a chill aloofness, and an appealing weariness about him, as of one who had labored much in profound thought and kept long vigils over books." He is said to be a man of profound learning and of tremendous mental and executive energy. While yet a boy he started out to write an encyclopedia. His published works number 23 volumes—for the most part bitter satires on human life saturated with a hopeless pessimism. He was best known in his home country by the enemies he made. He was a literary destroyer, pouring out the vials of his wrath against men, against creeds, against every philosophy that sought to hold out a hope for the uplift of humanity. It was the war that changed him. "Was there a way to change this horrible tragedy of war?" he asked himself, "to do away with it permanently?" He plunged into a long course of historical, philosophical and theological studies, seeking revaluations. Then, he says, as swiftly as the conviction came to Saul of Tarsus, he reached the conclusion that "the only solution was to change the spirit of mankind—to turn it towards religion." The result was his "Life of Christ."

For those who may look to Papini's "Life of Christ" to find answers to the attacks of the scientific skeptics and doubters, or the cold-blooded analysis of the historicity of Christ or of His gospel, there will be disappointment. Papini's work is not a polemic in the field of higher criticism or analysis that deals merely with human conclusions as to historic probabilities or improbabilities, holding that "the evidence of the gospels is as authentic as that adduced to prove any great historic event of that period." His book assumes no critical or scientific attitude—it is a "Life of Christ" for laymen, by a layman, written with one avowed purpose—"to make Christ live again for present day humanity, as the only hope for a world drifting into the darkness of negation and mutual destruction." But this one thing the book is, beyond all doubt—it is the work of a master of the literary art, full of eloquent passages, rich in poetic thought and diction, and with the power of sweeping the reader along in far upper currents of convincing thought and feeling that seem to make the wranglings and the squabbles of the "higher critics" and the jibes of the scientific skeptics quite petty affairs. It is a cosmic canvass that Papini spreads his colors on and he applies them with a masterful gesture.

After dwelling upon the efforts of philosophers and others to efface Christ—to crucify him a second time—Papini says:

"And still Christ is not yet expelled from the earth, either by the ravages of time or by the efforts of men. His memory is everywhere; on the walls of churches and the schools, on the tops of bell towers and of mountains, in street shrines, at the heads of beds and over tombs, thousands of crosses bring to mind the death of the Crucified One. Take away the frescoes from the churches, carry off the pictures from the altars, and from the houses, and the life of Christ fills museums and picture galleries. Throw away breviaries and missals, and you will find His name and His words in all the books of literature. Even oaths are an involuntary remembrance of His presence. When all is said and done, Christ is an end and a beginning, an abyss of divine mystery between two divisions of human history. Paganism and Christianity can never be welded together. Before Christ and after Christ. We can seek out what comes before Christ, we can acquire information about it, but it is no longer ours, it is signed with other signs, limited by other systems, no longer moves our passions; it may be beautiful, but it is dead. Caesar was more talked about in his time than Jesus, and Plato taught more science than Christ. People still discuss the Roman ruler and the Greek philosopher, but who nowadays is hotly for Caesar or against? And where the Platonists and the anti-Platonists? Christ, on the contrary, is still living amongst us. There are still people who love Him and who hate Him. There is still a passion for the love of Christ and a passion for His destruction. We live in the Christian era and it is not yet finished. If we are to understand the world, our life, ourselves, we must refer to Christ. Yet there never was a time more cut off from Christ than ours, nor one which needed Him more."

It was in this spirit that Papini's "Life of Christ" was conceived and wrought. No life of Christ, he tells us, even if it were written by an author of greater genius than any who has ever lived, could be more beautiful and perfect than the gospels. But who nowadays reads the gospels—who could read them, even if he set himself to the task, with their glosses of philologists, comments of exegetical experts, varying readings of erudite marginal editors, emendations of letters and so on? The old gospels must be retranslated for the help of the lost, in language and in spirit and with the light of a faith that will appeal to the humblest laymen. This, then, is the purpose of Papini's book. And he adds this personal explanatory note:

"How the writer came to discover Christ again, by himself, treading many roads, which all brought him to the foot of the Mount of the Gospels, and would be too long and too hard a story to tell. But there is a significance not perhaps wholly personal and private in the example of a man who always from his childhood felt a revulsion for all recognized forms of religious faith, and for all churches, and for all forms of spiritual vassalage, and who passed, with disappointments as deep as the enthusiasm had been vivid, through many experiences, the most varied and the most unacknowledged which he could find, who had consumed in himself the ambitions of an epoch unstable and restless as few have been, and who after so many wanderings, ravings and dreamings, drew near to Christ. He did not come back of weariness nor through the fears of old age, for he can still call himself a young man, and not through desire for worldly fame, because as things go nowadays he would have received more commendation if he had continued in his old ideas. But this man, turning back to Christ, saw that Christ is betrayed, and worse than any affront to Him, is being forgotten. And he felt the impulse to bring Him to mind and to defend Him."

AGAINST CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Warden of Sing Sing Declares It Is no Deterrent to Crime.

On the ground that it is not only barbarous but absolutely no deterrent of crime, Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing prison, New York State, is in favor of abolishing capital punishment.

"In advocating abolishing of capital punishment I cannot be classed as a sentimentalist," says the warden. "Yet I may say frankly that the worst of my duties are executions. My hope is always that the condemned man may be given the benefit of a reprieve or commutation, even though it may mean life imprisonment. My one fear is that it may be too late some day."

"A short time ago, a prisoner, within three hours of death was reprieved. That was a narrow margin, but one still closer is on record. This man was convicted on perjured testimony. All preparations for his death had been made. His hair had been trimmed; he had been dressed in black clothes. All hope had been given up."

"That man is free today, yet he will always bear the marks of his experience. The muscles of his throat were paralyzed, his voice cracked and he will never speak plainly again, yet he was innocent. An hour later and he would have been dead."

"Are there any proofs that executions are a deterrent to homicides? There are none. Homicides and promiscuous shooting continue. It is not electrocution but poor marksmanship that keeps the homicide list down. The intent exists."

"Between 1847 and 1917, 12 States abolished capital punishment. Not one has returned to it."

As crime preventative, Warden Lawes suggested:

Three-quarters of the prisoners in Sing Sing are under 21 years old.

Therefore, there must be more serious consideration of a juvenile delinquency. More playgrounds and community centers must be provided; Boy Scout and similar movements must be increased and the intelligent interest of adults aroused in them.

Home life must be made cleaner. Tenements must be razed and model tenements, at reasonable rentals, substituted. This is a great opportunity for philanthropists.

Illiteracy, a great contributing cause of crime, is more general than supposed. More school facilities must be provided.

The sale of revolvers and pistols should be forbidden by Federal law. No individual should be able to obtain either, except in the most exceptional cases.

Either enforce the prohibition law or else liberalize it to the extent where it can be enforced. At present, the prohibition law breeds a disrespect for other laws.

There should be a scientific application of justice," continued the warden. "We have 173 judges in this State and without a standard of sentences that means a wide variation of sentences. Oftentimes sentences are inflicted with no knowledge of the individual, even though the prisoner's whole future is at stake."

"The indeterminate sentence is a necessity. A man should be kept in prison until it is safe to return him to the community. The theory of modern penology is not revenge. Therefore, a man should be returned to his community as soon as he is capable of becoming a useful member of society. If he is incorrigible, he should never be given back his liberty. The Parole Board is in a far better condition to fix the sentence than the judge who sees the prisoner perhaps only a short time, and then under an atmosphere of tension."

"Then again, more than 70 per cent of prisoners plead guilty without standing trial, thus giving no opportunity for the court to study them. In those cases, it is the crime and not the individual that is sentenced. Parole has justified itself. More than 75 per cent of men on parole since the State board was established have made good."

Warden Lawes says the charge that Sing Sing prisoners were coddled had been made often. In this connection, he says that while the heads of the men in that prison were not shaved unless the prisoner so desired, and while stripes and the ball had been abolished, there was a system of discipline that was maintained at all times. Instead of "brute compulsion," discipline was maintained by "co-operation of inmates."

All male felons from the metropolitan district of New York city go to Sing Sing, the average being 125 a month and the normal population between 12,500 and 1,300, the ages ranging from 16 to 76 years. The sentences range from one year to life with the average about three years. About one-half have previous records, 9 per cent are drug addicts, and about 35 per cent defective, some having a mental age of but 6 years. Eighteen per cent come back for the second time.

Talks As Brain Is Being Pared

Under Local Anesthetic Tumor Is Taken From Skull of Man Given Up to Die.

What do you think of this man's experience? Would you like to duplicate it?

New York.—To have a portion of his skull removed, a four-inch tumor cut off and the skull bone restored to place, and to be fully conscious all the time, able to answer "I'm all right" to the surgeon's inquiries as to whether it hurt, was the experience of Henry A. Brown at the Beth Israel hospital. The operation, wholly successful, is said to be remarkable in medical history. Only a local anesthetic was applied.

Immediately afterward the patient, who had been suffering for a year from intense headaches, accompanied by gradually increasing delirium and partial coma, declared he felt a great relief from the pain. The operation was performed some weeks ago. The officials of the hospital have just made the facts known as the patient had completely recovered his faculties and was already enjoying the comforts of convalescence at the Burke foundation in White Plains.

Operation Takes Two Hours.

The operation was performed by Dr. K. Winfield Ney, assisted by Dr. Emil Altman, attending neurologist of the Beth Israel hospital, and Dr. Bernard Davdoff, the house surgeon. It lasted two hours.

The life of the patient had been despaired of. His grave had been purchased, and his family reconciled to the fact that he could not live. He is married and has four children. With hope of his recovery under the usual treatment entirely given up, the physicians at the Beth Israel called in Doctor Ney and consulted as to an operation. It was agreed that the general condition of the patient was such that he could not survive a long period under ether, but that an operation under a local anesthetic might possibly be successful.

They put it to the patient himself. Would he consent to the local anesthetic? Would he submit willingly to the operation while fully conscious? Brown said he would take the chance.

So they placed him on the operating table, and did not even strap him down, in order that he would retain the consciousness that he was doing it all of his own accord.

"It was not auto-suggestion," said Louis J. Frank, superintendent of the hospital, explaining it, "but we knew that the chances of success were much better if the patient were co-operating of his own free will."

Talks During Ordeal.

Questions and little words of cheer from the doctors accompanied the operation.

"Does this hurt?" the surgeon would say.

"No, I'm all right," the patient would answer. Or else he would wince and admit that he "felt it that time."

"Well now, that's too bad. We need a little more cocaine then," the doctor would say. "There won't be any more of that. We're almost through."

The technique of the operation, as described by Doctor Frank, was as follows:

"After the necessary skin incision was made, a number of holes were bored into the skull. The holes were connected, and the bone and overlying structures were turned down. The dura, or covering of the brain was incised. The tumor was visualized and then carefully incised.

"It was necessary to sacrifice the anterior portion of the frontal lobe of the brain, but this will not affect the mentality of the patient. After this the osteo plastic flap was turned

Holdup Victim Sues Bandit for Damages

Paso, Texas.—Attorneys for J. E. White, proprietor of a gasoline filling station here, said that a suit would be filed at once against the "unknown highwayman" who robbed White of $10, and thereby submitted him to "mental anguish, humiliation and danger." The petition will ask for $10,000 damages on these grounds.

The procedure is an innovation in Texas courts, attorneys here say.

Police engaged highwaymen who robbed while in a gas battle, and forced them to abandon an automobile. It is believed that if White wins the damage suit he will get legal possession of the car.

back and the scalp sutured. The tumor which was removed was 4 inches long and 2 inches wide and 3/4 of an inch thick. It was of the benign type and self-contained. Great care was exercised during this entire procedure. No unnecessary manipulation of any of the vital structures was performed."

Doctor Ney, who performed the operation, had wide experience during the war in the removal of shrapnel from the skulls of soldiers under local anesthetics. He served in the French army and later in the American Expeditionary forces. Since then he has advocated the use of local anesthetic for brain surgery.

The operation he performed at the Beth Israel is not the first of its kind, though the tumor removed was unusually large.

Seattle Scribe Forgot to Count Meridian Day

Seattle, Wash.—The meridian day when crossing the Pacific ocean is one long to be remembered by the traveler. Steaming westward he loses an entire day from his calendar. Steaming eastward there is one day on the calendar 48 hours long. This odd occurrence in mid-Pacific is at the 180th meridian of longitude, commonly called "the international date line." All ships crossing it lose a day going westward and gain a day east-bound.

Sidereal time, used by astronomers, is exact for its purpose, but is not suited to everyday business on earth. Consequently, man invented mean solar time by which an hour is lost

Scientific Survey Asked for Natural Phenomena on Upper Ottawa River in Canada.

Toronto.—The Canadian government has been asked to make a special survey which it is expected will prove by scientific measures that Canada is the possessor of the deepest river in the world.

Hidden beneath the amber waters of the Upper Ottawa river is one of nature's most curious phenomena, rivaling in its way the Grand Canyon of Colorado, the Natural Bridge of Virginia, the Falls of Niagara or Zambesi. It is a gigantic chasm cleft in the surface of the earth in a period which must have approached the earliest in for each 15 degrees (or 1,000 miles) traveled westward, or 24 hours in all during the 360-degree circuit of the globe. Going east 24 hours are gained. As they have to be accounted for somewhere to keep the world's time from chaos, the 180th meridian was chosen as the spot. It is half way around the earth from Greenwich, the longitude of which is 0, and is an appropriate place to lose or gain a day because there is very little business going on in mid-Pacific. The meridian passes through the Fiji Islands, and about 10 miles east of New Zealand.

Odd things happen in connection with the meridian day. Recently a Seattle reporter ran afoul of it and wired a story all over the continent to the effect that the Admiral Oriental Liner "President Grant" had broken the trans-Pacific record of 8 days, 18 hours and 31 minutes from Yokohama to Race Rock quarantine station, Victoria, B. C., made by the Canadian Pacific Liner "Empress of Russia" in 1914. The time claimed for the President Grant was 8 days, 10 hours and 44 minutes, but the reporter forgot to count the meridian day, east-bound, as 48 hours, consequently that ship's actual steaming time was 9 days, 10 hours and 44 minutes. As the Empress of Russia counted the meridian day as two days, she still holds the record.

Portland Citizen Declares Tanlac Completely Overcame Stomach Troubles.

J. P. Strahl, 6517 88th St., Portland, Oregon, speaking of his experience with Tanlac, says:

"Tanlac has ended my stomach trouble, built me up eighteen pounds and I now enjoy the best health of my life. But for two years before I got Tanlac, stomach trouble had me in its grip, and all sorts of ailments kept bobbing up to cause me misery. Scarcely anything I ate agreed with me, and I kept falling off till I was sixteen pounds underweight. Gas on my stomach bloated me till I could hardly breathe. I had attacks of biliousness and had to be all the time taking laxatives.

"Tanlac put me on my feet, fixed me up so I can eat heartily, sleep like a top and work at full speed. There's no two ways about it: Tanlac sure builds a solid foundation for health."

RESENT TAKING OF CENSUS

Enumerators in India Find Their Jobs Full of Undesirable Thrills—Many Are Beaten.

The trials and tribulations of a staff of some 2,000,000 census takers to find out there were approximately 310,000,000 people in India in 1921, have been related by J. Marten, census commissioner for India.

The employment of this huge army of enumerators, said Mr. Marten, was necessitated by the fact that, owing to the illiteracy of the population, the employment of the householder as enumerator of his household was impossible. He told of instances of enumerators being stabbed by suspicious Hindus, who considered the census takers too inquisitive. Some of the natives, on the other hand, resorted to violence when bribery failed to induce the census takers to make false entries showing that the natives enjoyed higher stations in the social scale than was really the case.

The census, Mr. Marten said, showed gain of 1.2 per cent over the population of 1911. The average density of population over the whole of India was 177 to the square mile. The maximum density of any province was in Bengal, where there were found to be 608 to the square mile.

"Puritan Massachusetts."

Good old Puritan Massachusetts, which is no longer Puritan, by the way, but Roman Catholic, has, according to the 1920 census, 28 per cent of foreign-born population and but 31.9 per cent of native-born of native parentage. Immigrants and the first generation of their children make up over two-thirds of her population. New York city, which is the largest Italian city and the largest Jewish city in the world, to say nothing of being the largest negro city, has only 20.7 per cent of native-born population of native parentage.—From the Independent.

If the Ottawa river were to dry up, the chasm with its walls 6,000 or 7,000 feet high would eclipse the wonder of Colorado. As it is, the Deep River reach of the Ottawa claims the distinction, which it is hoped will soon be scientifically confirmed, of being the deepest river in the world.

By comparison the Great Lakes are but duck ponds and the famous fords of Norway and the East American Atlantic coast are quite eclipsed. Lake Erie has a depth of only 272 feet. Lake Ontario is not much better with 738 feet. Lake Michigan has 789 feet. Lake Superior, the deepest of all the great inland seas, is only 1,007 feet, or about one-fifth as deep as the Deep River reach will probably prove to be. One of the East Atlantic fords shows 3,000 feet, and the Sogne fiord of Scandinavia is 4,000 feet.

They are at this point of the northwest edge of civilization. Toward the North Star and Hudson bay lies only wilderness broken only at one midway point by the National Transcontinental railway, which with its still rusting rails will one day give Canada depth as well as breadth. Prisoners Taken To Pittsburgh.

Finding of more than 400 knives, besides other weapons, secreted in the cells of prisoners in the Eastern penitentiary at Philadelphia in a recent search disclosed that a plot was being fostered among the prisoners which might have led to serious rioting and bloodshed but for its timely discovery. The alleged ring-leaders of the plotting, about 33 in number, were taken to the Western penitentiary at Pittsburgh, none of them being permitted to leave at Rockview as was intimated in a press dispatch, and order was restored.

LOUISE T. BUSH ESTATE

more than one, or in the surviving residuary beneficiary, if only one.

I nominate, constitute and appoint the Bellefonte Trust Company, Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, executor of this my last will and testament.

In witness whereof, I Louise T. Bush, the testatrix, have to this my last will and testament, set my hand and seal this 17th, day of September, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and twenty one.

(Signed) LOUISE T. BUSH, (SEAL)
Signed, sealed, published and declared by the above named Louise T. Bush, as and for her last will and testament, in the presence of us, who have hereunto subscribed our names at her request as witnesses thereto, in the presence of the said testatrix and of each other.

(Signed) DAVID DALE.

(Signed) W. R. BRACHBILL.

The Trusts under the will are to continue during the lives of the three beneficiaries and to the survivors or survivor. The remaining estate is to go to her grand-children Mrs. Garber and Mrs. Thompson and her heirs. In the event of the death of Mrs. Garber before the final settlement of her estate, then the whole of the estate is to go to Mrs. Thompson and her children. These Trusts may run at least from twenty-five to thirty-five years. Under the will the net income is distributed equally from time to time to Mrs. Callaway, George and Harry Bush. The money arising from the sales of real estate must be invested by the Bellefonte Trust Company as principal for the benefit of the grand-children to be paid to them after the death of the three beneficiaries. The real estate fund will be treated as Trust funds and under the law, subject to the examination of the State Banking Department. The Bellefonte Trust Company must invest separately in the name of Bush Estate and such Trust funds are not subject to the general creditors of the Trust Company. Mrs. Bush showed good business judgment in the selection of the Trust Company for her Trustee and Executor. Individual Trustees, in a period of thirty years, may die. Trust Companies being a corporation never die. This secures unity of management—one Trustee during the life of the Trusts. Other Estates with Trusts running thirty years or more will be subject to several sets of Trustees and every change will be a different management. Should a Trust Company dissolve or fail, the Trust funds are untouched and are secure to the beneficiaries.

"THE SHOW MUST GO ON."

Dot Snyder of Main Circus Upholds Tradition of Tent City.

The show must go on what e'er be-tide—
For that is the law of the white tops.
That is the creed of the sawdust trail.
Whose ritual knows no such word as fail.

Vivacious Dot Snyder of the Walter L. Main Big Three Ring Circus, which gives two performances in Bellefonte on Monday, May 7th, is one of the best examples of that age-old tradition of the circus world, which is that "the show must go on." Accident, sickness, storm, flood, or other calamity, must not interfere. "The show must go on."

Miss Snyder did an aerial act with the Main Show for two seasons with flattering success. One day the elephant trainer was taken suddenly ill, and it became necessary for some one to take his place, for "the show must go on." Miss Snyder had an instinctive fear of all animals, and had studiously avoided them, but no one knew this. In speaking of that memorable day, Miss Snyder said:

"When I was asked to take the elephant trainer's place that day I promptly agreed, but actually turned cold as I gave my consent. When I heard the music cue for the elephant act and followed the huge beasts into the ring, it took all the courage I possessed to keep from running away. But I entered the ring and started putting them through their routine, when suddenly I recalled that at one portion of the act one of the huge beasts had to crouch over me, and with the recollection I believe I came nearer fainting than I ever have in my life. I was so frightened that I simply went through the performance without realizing what I was doing. The only thing I recall distinctly was the loud burst of applause that greeted me at the conclusion of the act. But now, well now the elephants and I are the best of friends, and I have taught them several new tricks, and I expect to continue as an elephant trainer as long as I live, or as long as I am with the circus, and that I think will be a very long time, for the circus is in my blood. I love its people, and I love its life, and I hope to remain with it always."

HALF A MILLION MILES OF NEW WIRE WILL BE ADDED TO THE BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM IN PENNSYLVANIA THIS YEAR

THAT'S an increase of twenty per cent. in the total Bell wire mileage in the state.

This new wire alone would encircle the earth at the equator twenty times. It would reach the length of the state of Pennsylvania more than 1600 times.

More wire was placed in 1922 than in any previous year. We will place nearly twice as much in 1923.

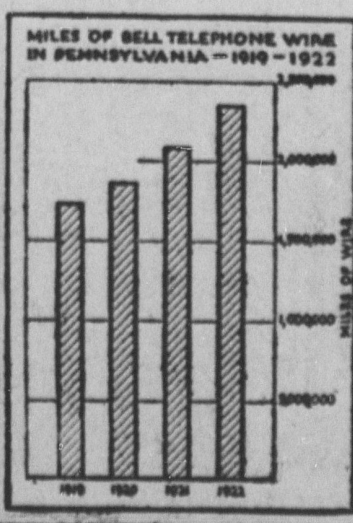

This is one phase of our effort to meet the demand for telephone service in Pennsylvania.

"Ran" Throssel, of the Millheim High School, won a prize of $5 for having the best note book on agriculture.

Millheim lodge I. O. O. F. hold their annual banquet in the Millheim building on May 1 from 5:30 to 9 o'clock. This is one of Millheim's gala social functions.

Now there is much danger from forest fires. Greatest care should be exercised. A very destructive fire raged in Curtin Gap, just south of Curtin, during the week-end and burned over many acres of mountain land on which valuable growing timber was damaged very much. Owing to the dryness of the woods and the strong winds that prevailed the flames swept ahead with rapidity and fierce heat, being very difficult to fight.

L. P. Fiedler and his farm hands recently watched five deer in one of Fiedler's grain fields, near Fiedler.

In the near future, it is announced, a lot of new machinery will be installed in the Millheim knitting mills. The new equipment includes 22 automatic knitters, 15 automatic ribbers and four looping machines. A complete dyehouse equipment will be added and then all the stockings knit will be dyed and finished in the Millheim mill, boxed and shipped direct to wholesalers instead of being sent to Philadelphia to be dyed and finished as has been the custom. This will mean many more employees and it is an indication that Millheim will boom still more.

Need Five Troopers.

Troop B, the Bellefonte Machine gun troop, needs five men to enlist to bring the quota to required strength. The troop has been an honor to the town and, especially during the occupying of the coal fields, when they were the only unit to be given an entire county to patrol, which they did with much success. MRS. G. W. RUMBERGER DEAD

Was One of Unionville's Most Highly Esteemed Residents.

In the passing away on Monday morning, at 4:30 o'clock, of Mrs. Margaret A. Rumberger, wife of G. W. Rumberger, of Unionville, that town lost one of its most highly esteemed and widely known residents, a woman of high attainments and mother of a splendid family. Complications incident to advanced age caused her death.

The deceased, a daughter of John and Ann Bevet Armagost, pioneer settlers in Buffalo Run valley, was born at Elmora on July 15, 1840. In early life she and her husband taught school. They were united in marriage on Dec. 29, 1859, so that for more than 63 years they had together shared the joys and sorrows of life, winning the friendship of hundreds of persons throughout the county through their own friendly and respected personalities.

Surviving are the bereaved husband, two brothers—Henry and John Armagost, of Hunters Park—and the following sons and daughters: Mrs. Joseph E. Bruggar, Unionville; John C., George F., and William H., of DuBois; Mrs. E. M. Griest, Philipsburg; Harry D., Scranton; Allen G., Tyrone; Mrs. A. F. Holderman, Huntingdon, and Miss Anna Laura, at home.

Funeral services were held from the home on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Her pastor, Rev. F. W. Andraes, of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated.

AGED NATIVE DEAD

Miss Henrietta Hartwick, Formerly of Stormtown, Was 96.

Miss Henrietta Hartwick, a native of Stormtown, died at midnight last Friday at the home of her nieces, Misses Kate and Minnie Walker, of Williamsport, with whom she had been residing. The deceased was 96 years old and had been in good health until 18 months ago, when she fell and has failed ever since. However, she managed to get about until two weeks ago when she was obliged to remain in bed.

Miss Hartwick was the last surviving member of a large family. She had resided at Stormtown all her life until 1904, when she went to Williamsport to make her home with Mrs. James Mansel, a sister. After the latter's death she made her home with the Misses Walker. She always returned to Stormtown each year, during the summer for a visit, until about two years ago. Her last trip was made by automobile, both going and returning.

Miss Hartwick was very well known in Halfmoon valley. The remains were taken to Stormtown for burial in the family plot on Monday morning.

Guy Lucas Dead.

Guy Lucas, for six years a member of the United States standing army, who returned from France robust and healthy to all appearances, died Sunday in the sanitarium at Mt. Alto from tuberculosis and the remains were brought to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lucas of Milesburg, burial being made in the Triczyulny cemetery this Thursday afternoon. The deceased was born at Snow Shoe and was 28 years old. He never married and had been employed in the coal mines at Snow Shoe since returning from France. About January last he went to the Mt. Alto sanitarium, tuberculosis having developed from injuries to his lungs received when he was gassed during the World war.

A telegram announcing the death of Miss Anna Way, a cousin, was received by John Bullock, of Bellefonte, on last Thursday afternoon. Miss Way died at her home in Marcus Hook, near Philadelphia. A peculiar coincidence was that her mother, Mrs. Sarah Way, died two weeks before. The latter was Mr. Bullock's only surviving aunt and was close to 90 years of age. WILL CONDUCT POPPY SALE

Auxiliary to Co-Operate With Legion in Campaign—All Urged to Wear Flower on Memorial Day.

"Wear a poppy on Memorial day." This is the message to all good Americans from Mrs. Edna M. Barcus of Indianapolis, Ind., chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary poppy campaign committee. The auxiliary has decided to co-operate with the Legion in the campaign which is to be conducted a few days prior to May 30.

The poppies—silken replicas of the real flower—bearing the official emblem of the American Legion, are to be sold in a public campaign opening a few days before Memorial day. Funds obtained from this source will be used by local posts of the American Legion for service work, erection of memorials, and for donations to the $100,000 endowment fund providing annual decoration of graves of American dead in Europe. A certain portion of this fund which will accrue to national headquarters of the Legion will be devoted to their service work, in caring for the claims of disabled and troubled men, seeking relief through the agency of the Legion's national offices.

Mrs. Edna M. Barcus.

In a recent message to members of the 5,700 units of the auxiliary scattered throughout the United States, Mrs. Barcus said:

"I know that in your hearts you are anxious to show that you remember our glorious dead; that you are anxious to pay a tribute of respect and admiration for those who fought in the war. Let us on Memorial day unite in a spirit of splendid brotherhood and patriotism and in outward sign, in memory of those who, fulfilling the noblest traditions of their country, have written another beautiful chapter in American history. The poppy of Flanders is a fitting emblem to perpetually remind us and unfailingly teach coming generations our debt to those who valiantly saved the light of liberty for us."

"The unselfish aim of this campaign should spur us to action. Wear a poppy Memorial day. See that every man, woman and child in your community and in America wears a poppy that day."

LEGION HOME FOR ORPHANS

Kansas Organization Is Offered 388 Acres and $25,000 Cash Toward Proposed Institution.

As a memorial to his two sons, who died in the service of their country with the Thirty-fifth division, Daniel Dabney of Independence, Kan., has offered the American Legion of Kansas 388 acres of land and $25,000 in cash as a start toward the erection of a Legion home for the orphans of ex-service men and women. Mr. Dabney is an oil man and has taken this method of expressing his belief in the Legion and of paying fitting tribute to his sons and their comrades-at-arms who gave their lives for their country.

"The Kansas department of the Legion is inspired by Mr. Dabney's gift," says Commander W. P. MacLean. "It renewed efforts in behalf of the children. It has long been a dream of the state," he says, "to undertake some constructive program for the establishment of an orphans' home, and this gift makes a realization of the dream seem imminently possible."

"Here is a chance," says MacLean, "to do something big for the Legion and for Kansas. The national headquarters of the Legion is already considering the proposition of establishing a national orphans' home. It has appointed an orphans' home committee of which a Kansas man is chairman. Kansas can get something that will focus the attention and hold the hearts of the Legion to Kansas to a vastly greater extent, and that is the home and training school for our Legion children. We can get it by taking advantage of this big start that has been offered to us by Mr. Dabney, and by going to work at once and establishing a school that will soon be recognized, taken over and supported by the national organization."

A citizens' committee at Independence has been organized and has offered its services in co-operation toward obtaining a fund to erect the first building on the site. The proposed orphanage would be composed of several cottages instead of one large building, with the idea of making it a home rather than a formal institution, under the plans now being considered.

He-Man's Job to Climb Everest

Member of Former Expeditions Tells of Difficulties Involved in Reaching Top.

New York.—"Why did you want to climb Mount Everest?" This question was asked of George Leigh Mallory, who was with both expeditions toward the summit of the world's highest mountain, in 1921 and 1922, and who is now in New York. He plans to go again in 1924, and he gave as the reason for persisting in these repeated attempts to reach the top, "Because it's there."

"But hadn't the expedition valuable scientific results?"

"Yes. The first expedition made a geological survey that was very valuable, and both expeditions made observations and collected specimens, both geological and botanical. The geologists want a stone from the top of Everest. That will decide whether it is the top or the bottom of a fold. But these things are by-products. Do you think Shackleton went to the South pole to make scientific observations? He used the observations he did make to help finance the next trip. Sometimes science is the excuse for exploration. I think it is rarely the reason."

"Everest is the highest mountain in the world, and no man has reached its summit. Its existence is a challenge. The answer is instinctive, a part, I suppose, of man's desire to conquer the universe."

This is pure romance, call it what else you will, and every man recognizes its touch. It leads into jungles and over deep waters and up through the high, thin reaches of the air. Its glamorous trail goes through the doors of moving picture houses and up one flight to the chop suey restaurant. It is inherent in the "dares" of childhood. It makes the timid boy dive from the pierhead, and it sent the British Royal Geographical society's and the Alpine club's expedition nearer the sky than any man had climbed before without taking unto himself wings.

1,700 Feet Yet to Go.

The first expedition sent out by the Royal Geographical society and the Alpine club cost $6,000 and only got as high as 21,000 feet. The second attempt cost $11,000 and reached 27,235 feet. That leaves 1,700 feet to go, and there is no telling how much it will cost to make the last spurt. Moreover, it takes a long time to reach the place where climbing begins. The last stage of the journey is a five weeks' tramp across the Tibetan plains from Darjeeling, mile after mile of bare earth and rock, with meager patches of dried growth in the lee of a ledge or in a slight depression, showing where a little moisture collected in the spring and summer. The pack animals live on this poor fare. The human natives, whom Mr. Mallory believes to be the least virile of the Mongols, pushed into this desolate corner by their stronger kin, fare hardly better on tamsa, a coarse sort of barley meal.

Plans for assault on Everest are laid as carefully as for a military campaign. That, aside from the grit and stamina of the climbers, is the most important factor for success. The lack of a cooking pot, an oxygen tank, a canteen or a rope, at the right spot at the right moment, may doom the expedition. The party was able to go as high as they did by the establishment of a succession of base camps, the highest being at 21,000 feet. This meant that each camp must have supplies sufficient not only for the climbers, but also for the porters, who were to carry the equipment necessary to make the next camp. In all, the expedition carried something over twenty tons of equipment, baggage and stores. Pack animals, mostly yaks, were used across the plain and up the slopes as far as the glacier. Beyond that point the work was done by fifty porters, men from the native state of Nepal, whose splendid strength and endurance hold out the hope of establishing camp at a still greater height.

Must Be Perfect Physically.

Other things besides time, money and executive ability were demanded of the expedition; the utmost quality of the climbers, for instance. Perfect physical condition is, of course, essential, for under the most favorable conditions the strain of effort in those awful altitudes is such that normal fitness is not regained for months after the ordeal. Good heart and lungs are the most important prerequisites. Even perfect organs would not avail without long mountaineering experience. The men were picked of their Alpine records, not so much on the written record of so many feet climbed in so many hours as on the reputations that grew up through the gossip of mountaineers: That so-and-so is a fearful fellow to keep up with, that another is fast and sure and never tires. They had need for every bit of their skill, experience and strength in this struggle.

Perpendicular travel is slow at best, but on the higher slopes of Everest it slowed down to 330 feet an hour—about the length of a short city block, the distance that a good runner can make in ten seconds. Twenty-nine thousand feet of that is no week-end sport.

For instance, no mountaineer experiences vertigo. He wouldn't be one long if he did. The reason the untrained mortal feels dizzy on the brink of a thousand-foot drop is that his eyes find nothing to rest on. The mountaineer's eye is trained to vast spaces all about, and particularly beneath him. There is rarely a vertical wall to be climbed. Almost always there is a slight slope, and here a few degrees mean everything to the eye. Mr. Mallory says that personally he can use with equanimity at the sky end of a few thousand feet of cliff or ice wall any footing that would serve him on lower levels.

A Useful Hint.

Here is a useful hint for incipient mountaineers upon conduct during an avalanche, or rather in an avalanche. If it is of rocks and ice, the affair must be left almost entirely to the avalanche itself. Its constituent parts bounce. You are all right unless you conflict with a trajectory. There is little chance of dodging. Snow is another matter. Its tendency is to pull you under and crush or suffocate you. The point of endeavor is to stay on the surface and to keep your arms up above your head. In the avalanche which killed seven porters and halted his own attempt to reach the summit, Mr. Mallory found himself "swimming on his back." At the end the snow packed in such a way as to push him and others to the surface, instead of dragging them down.

"It's easy enough to breathe," he explained, "and while you keep perfectly still you feel all right. But when you try to move, you have a bad time getting started. Then you have to pump so hard to keep going that you wear yourself out. When I came back from the expedition, the muscles of my diaphragm were tremendously developed just from breathing." (N. B. Why wouldn't breathing rarefied air be splendid training for opera singers?) Oxygen, inhaled in small doses, will keep you from freezing to death. This fact a part of the expedition discovered during one night spent 25,500 feet above sea level, in the grip of a furious storm. The insane wind threatened every minute to sweep them and their tiny tent off the slope, and the cold gripped them with fatal creeping numbness, in spite of their heavy woolen clothing, windproofed and electrically heated. Hot drinks were impossible, because the water boiled at such a ridiculously low temperature. Alcohol was a dangerous stimulant, from the point of view of altitude, not morals. Oxygen was the last chance and the first whiffs brought the tingle of returning life.

"Climbing in the Alps," said Mr. Mallory, "is wonderfully exhilarating, but scientists say that, above 18,000 feet, altitude is physically and mentally depressing. Your perceptions are all slowed down. For instance, toward the end we were making only 330 feet an hour. In the Alps we would have been going at four times that rate, yet I didn't realize that we were climbing slowly."

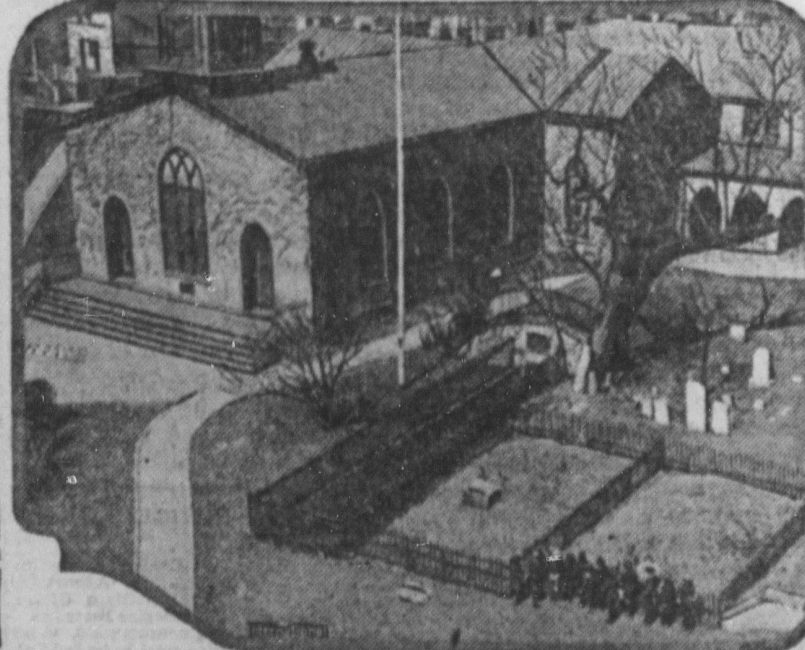

Depends on Oxygen.

Hope of ultimately reaching the very top of Everest depends largely on the increased use of oxygen and the establishment of a camp at 27,000 feet. One scientist told Mr. Mallory that they should remain at that altitude for as many as five days, since acclimatization would greatly lessen the strain of exertion. The chief obstacles to this scheme are that every day of good weather must be used, and the difficulty of finding a possible camping place. There are no levels or adequate shelters. This makes it almost impossible to sleep and very hard to secure a tent. Some one has suggested that they blast a shelter out of the mountain side.

If a returned explorer is properly polite and becomingly modest, his manner will give you the impression that he has done nothing that any earnest and industrious young man might not get up and do. For instance, Mr. Mallory will tell you that his real job is teaching English literature and history at the Charterhouse school for boys. He was in the habit of spending every August in the Alps, and when he was asked to go with the Everest expedition, he thought he'd do it "for a change." His chief interest is in writing, and he had a book on Boswell published a few years ago. He could tell you a lot about Boswell if you weren't so obviously interested in mountains.

Be not beguiled, O, armchair explorer! Stick to the comparative security of your subway strap. For this quiet young man's casual comment raises the ghost of such a tremendous adventure as the fireside mind can scarce conceive; of crawling along knife-edges in the teeth of a bitter wind; of chopping footholds up the face of a wall of ice; of moving on where each step may very reasonably be expected to be the last, and yet taking that step, and the next, and the next after that; of pushing up and up in spite of frozen fingers and toes, in spite of laboring heart and bursting lungs, until death is certain just ahead, and then turning back just as steadily, to wait for the next opportunity.

Photograph shows a general view of St. Anne's Episcopal church at One Hundred Forty-first street and St. Anne's avenue, the Bronx, New York, which is said to be the resting place of Pocahontas, the Indian maiden who saved the life of Capt. John Smith. It was believed that the body of the Indian girl was taken to England and buried there. A research party was to have sailed for England shortly in an effort to locate the grave, but it recently became known that the body had been brought back to New York, and buried in the graveyard of St. Anne's church, which was built originally by Governor Morris, one of the earliest executives of New York. The body is said to rest in a vault in the graveyard.

Boy Spared as Lightning Kills Cow He Is Milking

Glasgow, Ky.—Arn Vaughan, son of Hiram Vaughan, farmer, of Prewitt Knob, this county, had the most remarkable escape from death ever recorded in this county.

The young farmer was milking a cow in his father's barn when a bolt of lightning struck the barn, killed the cow he was milking and six large hogs nearby, and literally burned one of the youth's shoes off his foot.

Young Vaughan was unhurt and declared he felt no pain or shock from the bolt.

FIVE SAILORS BEATEN TO DEATH BY SMUGGLERS

Mistaken for Raiding Officers by Outlaws and Killed.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Five dead men on the smugglers' isles of Channel and Santa Cruz, off the Coast of California, and thousands of bottles of drugs and rum will explain the "wetness" of Santa Barbara and the narcotic supply of Los Angeles and Hollywood, federal and state officials declared recently.

Five fishermen, whose bodies were found in coves along the shores of Santa Cruz and Channel islands, 35 miles from the mainland, were killed by rum and dope smugglers, it is declared. The men were beaten to death when the outlaws mistook them for raiding officers, it is believed.

The twin islands, part of the state, are mountainous, wild and inhabited only by a few sheep and cattle herders. Innumerable coves indent the shores and make ideal landing places for smugglers' boats. The islands are as snug a paradise as Captain Kidd could wish.

Capt. Frank Nidever of the fishing boat Eagle, and Capt. Jerry Shipley of the fishing boat O. K., and three sailors of their crews were beaten to death, apparently while they were trying to escape from the smugglers.

A revenue cutter, manned by armed revenue agents supplied with ample munitions, has been sent to the two mysterious islands.

BRAVES RAPIDS TO ENTER U. S.

Canadian Walks Across Narrow Girder Above Swirling Cataract, but Risk Was of No Avail.

Niagara Falls.—Threading a narrow girder under the railroad tracks of the cantilever bridge, 150 feet above the Niagara rapids, Leo Castle, eighteen years old, of Alberta, Canada, walked from the Canadian to the American shore in a vain attempt to enter the United States. He was arrested as soon as he set foot on the American side of the river.

Castle's performance was not a "movie" stunt, but nevertheless it provided plenty of thrills. Earlier in the day he had twice been barred from the American side, as he lacked the $5 with which to pay the head tax. Then he decided to try the hazardous trip on the girders.

The path selected by the lad is about ten inches wide. The struts that branch out from the main framework offer no support nor guide to a person standing upon it. Far below are the churning waters of the river, breaking to the whirlpool rapids below. One false step would have sent Castle to death.

The boy walked nonchalantly, at times almost ran, while the few persons who watched gasped in fear. But the trip and the risk were all in vain. Immigration officials were among the spectators, and Castle was soon in custody and was later sent back to Canada.

27 SPOONS IN MAN'S STOMACH

Silverware and Other Knickknacks Removed From Interior of Epileptic Who Is Recovering.

Parsons, Kan.—J. A. Malgrene, forty, an inmate of the Kansas State Hospital for Epileptics here, has recovered from an operation when 27 spoons were removed from his stomach.

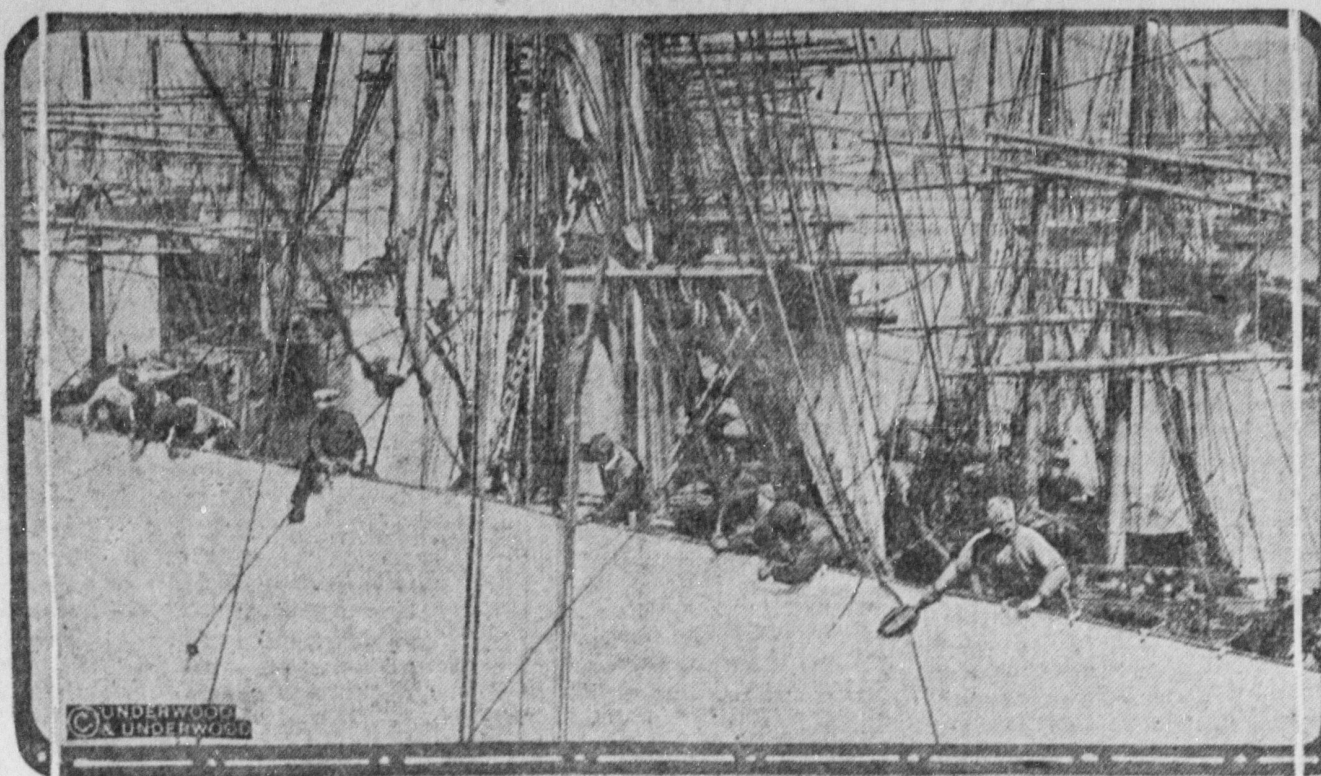

According to doctors, Malgrene's mental condition was responsible for his mania of devouring silverware. For months his condition has puzzled physicians.

Wednesday noon his meals were served to him in bed. An attendant reported her patient had swallowed a spoon. X-ray pictures were taken of his stomach and it was said the remains of several spoons showed up when the picture was developed.

Surgeons operated on Malgrene Wednesday night and removed the silverware and several small pieces of wood believed to be matches. Some of the spoons removed were partly disintegrated by digestive fluids and brought the statement from the doctors that Malgrene may have been enjoying his spoon salads for more than a year.

Here are C. F. Rieger and the engine he runs on the Illinois Central between Chicago and Freeport. He is said to have broken all records by running his locomotive three years and a half without shop overhauling. He modestly gives the credit to the careful attention given his work reports by the roundhouse mechanic at the close of every trip.

LEGION IS NONPOLITICAL

National Commander Reiterates Statement That Organization Does Not Mix in Controversies.

Replying to an assertion that the American Legion was engaged in political activity in California, made in congress by Representative Goodykoontz of West Virginia, Alvin Owsley, Legion national commander, stated:

"The American Legion reiterates the statement that it is a nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization. It is not concerned whether its members are Republicans, Democrats or Socialists, Protestants, Catholics or Jews. It is the one all-inclusive American organization of ex-service men. The first qualification for membership must be that a man or woman served America in her great crisis. It follows then, naturally, that the man or woman is qualified to serve America in peace, now.

"The American Legion is not interested in the political destiny of any of the great parties. A distinguished congressman seems unable to read the difference between loyalty to political parties and loyalty to country. The American Legion looks beyond and above all consideration of party interest, and sees only the good of the country.

"Mr. Goodykoontz charges that the Legion in California appreciates and is undertaking to circulate a speech of William G. McAdoo, delivered at Fullerton, Cal., last Armistice day, in which he discusses the adjusted compensation bill. I have no information that this is true. But if it is, I must also call the attention of the congressman to the fact that for more than a year the Legion has been circulating to its members and to the general public the addresses of Hon. Joseph W. Fordney, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house at the present time, and the author of the adjusted compensation bill. If the distinguished statesman from West Virginia will make a good speech favoring the adjusted compensation bill, the American Legion will, in all likelihood, give the largest circulation to his speech that he has ever had in all his life."

WILSON AND PADUCAH FIRST

Former President and Kentucky Post Prompt With Donations to Decorate Graves in Europe.

Woodrow Wilson, commander of the members of the American Legion during their World war days, was the first war notable to contribute to the permanent endowment fund of $100,000 which the Legion will raise to provide for the permanent decoration of graves of war dead in Europe. The first Legion post to respond to the appeal for funds was the post at Paducah, which announced a contribution of $25 within a few hours after the appeal was broadcast.

The Legion, in announcing the campaign, stresses the fact that the raising of a permanent fund will obviate the necessity of making yearly appeals for contributions. The fund will remain in the national treasury of the American Legion, subject to expenditure only for the purpose of decorating the graves of 32,100 war dead in Europe.

Many posts will raise their quotas for the fund by selling poppies during the week preceding Memorial day. Legion national headquarters has obtained a supply of 2,500,000 silk poppies and has urged all members and patriotic citizens to wear the flower in honor of those who lie in Flanders fields.

AH SING IS TO BE CHEMIST

Chinese-American Boy, Recent Americanism Essay Contest Winner, Has Chosen Profession.

Ah Sing Ching, thirteen-year-old Chinese-American boy, of Ewa, Oahu, Hawaii, who won first prize in the American Legion's national essay contest, was the guest of honor at a recent meeting of the Ad club of Honolulu.

After the luncheon, some one asked little Ah Sing Ching, who defeated 50,000 American-born school children in the contest, "What do you expect to study as you grow up and go to college?"

And he answered without hesitation, "chemistry."

The man who asked the question said afterward: "That little Chinese-American boy has picked what to my mind is the great coming profession—that of chemist. The world today is being developed by chemistry, and the great industrial developments of the future will come through chemistry."

Ah Sing Ching will receive a scholarship of $750 in any college or university, donated by Hanford MacNider, past national commander of the Legion.

Garland W. Powell, national Americanism director of the Legion, has announced that another essay contest for school children will be held this year.

Base Ball Notes.

St. Francis College base ball nine from Loretto defeated the Bellefonte Academy nine at the Hughes field here on Saturday afternoon in the opening game of the season, the score being 3-2. It was a very good game with many exciting plays and St. Francis team was very speedy.

Two Pretty Trophies.

John J. Payne, superintendent of vocational education in Centre County, has on display at his office in the Court House two very attractive athletic trophies received during the week-end. The one, a large loving cup, presented by the business men of State College, will be the trophy awarded the leader in girls' events at the Centre County High Schools field meet in Bellefonte next month, the date probably to be May 19th. The other is a valuable silver trophy presented by George Graham, of State College, for the winner in the Centre County High School Base Ball League.

Charged With Larceny.

John Messenger, W. C. Showers and Ralph Snyder, three young men from Milesburg, were assigned before Justice J. M. Keichline, of Bellefonte, last Thursday morning on a charge of larceny of a tire and other accessories from the Decker Bros. garage on Water street. The men pleaded guilty and furnished bail in the amount of $500 each for their appearance in court.

Object of Academy Minstrels.

Many persons have wanted to know the object for raising money with the Academy minstrels this year. In a nutshell, Prof. J. R. Hughes, says, "To raise some money toward the heavy expense involved in laying a water pipe from the Boro line to the big swimming pool on Hughes field in order to insure a continuous supply of running water and enable flooding of the pool in winter to provide continuous skating. To keep the water right it will require both the electric pump and the pipe line. This is a public benefit and should appeal to every one. There was no skating this year because the pool could not be flooded after the heavy snows." The Academy has been generous with benefit. The Red Cross, Troop L, the hospital, firemen and Y. M. C. A. have all been substantially aided. Give them two good houses this year and help get a water supply at Hughes field that will be in keeping with the place where so many persons enjoy themselves. The dates for the minstrels are May 17 and 18. The big minstrel dance will be held on Friday evening, the 18th, from 11 to 3 o'clock.
